interesting. My picture was received there. I was very cordially received. Everyone was nice." She said the big event was her meeting with President Eisenhower.

Plea Presented

BISHOP OTTO DIBELIUS, a president of the World Council of Churches, went to East Berlin to hand to Russian Orthodox Archbishop Boris a council appeal for peace and justice. The appeal, issued at the Evanston, Ill., meeting of the council, calls for peace and justice for all men and expresses sympathy for members of churches which do not belong to the world council.

Artistry Hailed

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER said in a recorded message for the 25th anniversary of the Museum of Modern Art in New York that "Freedom of the arts is a basic freedom, one of the pillars of liberty in our land. For our republic to stay free, those among us with the rare gift of artistry must be able freely to use their talent."

Red Fear Cited

ALLEN W. DULLES, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, said in New York the force most feared by Russia's rulers is the desire of their own people for freedom. The democracies "can and must exploit" this fear which he termed the "Achilles heel" of the Communist dictatorship. He spoke at the 23rd annual New York Herald Tribune Forum.
